The co-working segment in India is expected to receive $400 million in investments by 2018, according to a recent study. The potential market size for the co-working segment across India currently stands in the range of 12-16 million sqft. This includes start-up employees, professional freelancers, staff at emerging businesses (SME's) as well as large corporate office employees. Of this potential nation-wide market size, the total addressable market size for co-working space across the six major cities of Delhi NCR, Mumbai, Bangalore, Chennai, Hyderabad and Pune is approximately 5 million sqft.

Big business opportunity here lies with large corporate firms seeking alternative, activity-based workplaces to nurture their talent and further their business growth. The small, emerging business sector follows as the second demand group looking for hot desking opportunities at low cost shared workplaces, while professional freelancers and start-ups form the rest of the market demand.

Mr. Gaurav Kashyap, CEO of Cherry Hill Interiors says, "Co-Working has a great future in India and coincides well with the Start-up India Initiative & the culture supported by the government. These spaces are vibrant, full of energy and support generation of new ideas, providing much needed relief to start-ups, young professionals, work-at-home professionals, independent consultants, scientists, engineers, and entrepreneurs - by providing a legally recognized, Grade A & tier 1 address, which hedges risk of using office spaces which are not regularized by the local authorities. Co-working spaces have arrived and are the future, which is also aligned to the vision of Cherry Hill to help its clients achieve the office of the future."
